SELECT MISCELLANY.

THE ANGEL AT MANDY'S ELBOW.

"I say he shall go."

"And I say he shan't, there now!"

"Well, I do wish if you do think so much of your old dog, that you and he would go off together. Look at that clean floor all marked with his dirty feet! I'd be ashamed to think so much of a dog just because he belonged to a man that lifted you a hundred years ago. Get out, bones!"

It was a pleasant little house enough, with shaded porch and vine-girdled lattices over the kitchen doorway, whence, in hot haste, ran a queer shambling hound, bearing the marks of great age. He ran as quickly as his stiff legs would carry him, looking fearfully back at Mandy Brett, a maiden of fifty winters, who stood in the doorway brandishing that woman' weapon—a broom. Mandy was built on the principal of strength rather than beauty. Her face was not uncomely at its best, but grim now with wrath and vexation.

She looked askance at her sister Ruth, who held a thin, blue-veined hand tight over her mouth to keep back an angry reply, as she followed the beaten hound around the house and down by the great hop-vine which covered an old plum tree with its luxuriant leaves. Ruth, or Ruthie, as Mandy was want to call her in her gentle moods, was slender, pale, with hazel eyes that had once been merry, and a heavy twist of brown hair threaded with gray on the temples. She had been a pretty girl and was fair and sweet still, being the junior sister by fifteen years.

For years the two sisters had lived on in the little cottage, with a certain measure of happiness. At least while strong-willed Mandy was uncrossed, or uncontradicted, she held the reins of government peaceably.—Ruth bore the domestic oppression very patiently for the most part, but during the last week she had been crossed in a half dozen little things, and was in a mood to resent the blow on poor old Bones' rusty back.

She wanted jam made from the currants, and Mandy had carried the day with "jelly." She wanted celery put in where the early potatoes were dug, and Mandy had turnips instead. She wanted to have the minister and his wife to tea; and it was vetoed until after hop-picking—said hop-picking being a solemn ceremony performed every year with a most rigorous regard to the maxim that the September sun must never shine on the hop. So the very last day of August Mandy attired herself in a wonderful suit of regimentals devoted to berry picking, and a slab calico bonnet like the Hoosac tunnel, provided Ruthie with like uniform, and gathered in the crop to be dried, papered and never used, but it always had been done, and so it must be.

Whether Mandy ever found a man brave enough to court her love, no legend saith, but there was a lover once for Ruth. There were lotterings by the hawthorne hedge, and long walks home from the evening church; there were happy hours on the doorsteps, when Mandy had gone to the sewing society, whence she would return with stiff glazed calico aprons for Ruthie to hem, as best she might.

Ruthie did not care much about the sewing society, but she did not rebel against the work imposed on her, and thought on the whole that Mandy's absence and Edwin Carter's presence made the trial light to bear. Bones was a little puppy then, and came to her in Ed's pocket, and ever since had served as a memorial of him.

There was a quarrel about some trivial thing, hasty words which both were too proud to recall, a widening gulf of months, that flooded over a waste of years, and carried girlhood with their rapid rush away.

There were times when the poor loving woman's heart would have held itself at Edwin's feet, but Mandy's taunts reminded her that "a woman ought to be ashamed to let a man know that she was such a soft-hearted thing." And Ed was proud, and tried to forget, in the China trade and its excitement, the schoolgirl he had loved.

Ruthie found the old dog in the garden-path. Calling him to her, she sat down on the little wooden bench, while he, full of pity that seemed human, laid his rough old head against her arm. It was some comfort for her to cry over him, and talk softly words that Mandy would have called nonsense. Life looked so dark to her! only this plodding round of little cares, roughened more and more by unkindly and hasty words—no patient mother love to know her at her best, no love of husband or child to lighten the downgoing of her weary feet.

She went to the foot of the garden, and by the little foot path over the hill toward her mother's grave, while Bones trotted patiently beside her through the dusk that was stealing on, and so she passed out of sight.

Mandy finished washing the teacups, giving each one a vicious tweak as she wiped it, going often to the doorway to look for Ruth, who was nowhere in sight. Then she called. "Meetin'-time! are you going?" but there was no answer.

"Sulky, I s'pose—can't say a word to that girl but what she's affronted—well, let her pout it out."

She untied her apron string with a jerk, and hung her apron up beside the broom, and then putting on the "night mertin' bonnet," which had "no nonsense about it," she pulled the kitchen door with a bang, clanged the gate loudly, and walked briskly off to the school house."

Once seated there she did not find her thoughts in harmony with the occasion, and some qualms of self-reproach began to disturb her meditations. She pulled out her hymn-book and tried to read but began to fear that there might be a terrible flaw in her own title, and shut up the book. But it would open just where, on the fly-leaf, was written in a quaint, neat hand, "Sister Mandy, from Ruthie." And then came a remembrance of the sorrowful, slender figure as it walked away with poor old Bones.

"When I can read my title clear,"

"I was too hard on Ruth, I guess," she said

THE St. Louis Republican, in its classification of papers gives the following result: Of the Democratic papers which advocate a straight out nomination by the Convention, it names 11; of those that speak well of the Cincinnati ticket, but await the action of the Democratic Convention, 31; of those that commend the Cincinnati ticket to the support of the Democratic party it enumerates 65. Since its publication, there are nearly as many more of the second and third classes.

ON last Saturday evening when the returns of the primary election were being brought in, Dr. Shurlock appeared with the vote of Darlington township. He announced it as follows: "J. S. Rutan 73, John F. Dravo, bastard 40. His low, coarse term, did not even suit the crowd in which it was uttered, for it neither provoked a smile, nor called out a word in response. The very fact that Dr. Shurlock could thus speak of a man whose shoes he is unworthy to loose, should of itself satisfy the people of this county, that they not only did right last fall in defeating him for the legislature, but that they committed a great wrong in ever sending him to Harrisburg at all. They will not be likely to repeat the wrong.

GEN. SHERIDAN advises the War Department that there are about 2,000 hostile Indians collected near Fort Berthold, who have declared their intention to oppose the progress of work on railroads this summer. They have torn up the stakes planted by a surveying party in the Powder River country. When the Railroad companies shall have pushed their work to the west side of the Missouri, the Indians contemplate concentrating their forces to a general hostile movement in mass against the companies. They number among their leaders the following well known hostile Indian chiefs: Setting Bull, Black Moon, Iron Dog, Iron Horn, Four Horns, and Long dog. These Indians are well armed and equipped.

A BILL is now pending in the Senate of the United States, looking to the establishment of industrial schools for the orphans of soldiers and sailors. It is of the simplest possible form, and is confined to creating a "body politic and corporate," with power to hold property and transact business. General A. E. Burnside is the leading incorporator; the other names are unfamiliar. The work is an excellent one, and as it does not involve the slightest expense to the country, it ought to pass. Indeed, the country could do no more just and proper thing than to aid pecuniarily an enterprise, rightly guarded and conducted, which would give an honorable means of earning a livelihood to any soldier's children.

THE U. S. Senate, on the evening of May 24th, after a continuous executive session of more than nine hours, by the requisite two-thirds vote advised the President to negotiate an additional article to the treaty of Washington on the basis recently proposed by the British government, though in a form somewhat different from it, but not altered in principle; the amendment being designed to secure an obligation on the part of both governments without detriment to either, and without placing the United States in an attitude receding from their position, as if in compliance with the requirement of the British government. The action of the Senate on that occasion was kept more than ordinarily confidential, as if the Senators had been placed under additional obligations of secresy; but there is no reason whatever to doubt the truth of the foregoing statement. The President and Secretary Fish were officially advised of the action of the Senate, and a telegram was sent by the latter to Minister Schenck, acquainting him with the facts, for the information of the British government. It was expected that on Monday last a response would be received from London, when the Senate will ratify the additional article to the treaty.

THE House Amnesty bill passed the Senate on the 22d inst., and has since been signed by the President and is now a law. It provides that all political disabilities imposed by the 3d section of the 14th Amendment to the constitution of the United States are removed from all persons except Senators and Representatives of the 36th and 37th Congresses, and officers of judiciary military and naval services, heads of departments and foreign ministers of the United States. The number relieved by this act is estimated, by well informed Southerners, to be over 150,000, persons of capacity and experience who have been disfranchised since the close of the war—have been debarred from all participation in county, state and national politics. The passage of this bill will dispose of a great number of cases now pending in the United States Supreme Court, and in the District and Circuit Courts, where information has been made against persons holding office, contrary to the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution. One of the most important of these is that of the Hon. A. O. Nicholson, ex-United States Senator, and Judge of the Supreme Court of Tennessee. This case has been carried to the United States Supreme Court, and would be reached early next Winter; but, since the Amnesty bill has passed, the Attorney-General will, without doubt, enter a nolle prosequi in this and all similar cases. The District-Attorneys throughout the country will also probably be instructed to take the same action in regard to similar cases in their courts.

—The German Baptists or Dunkards are assembled for their annual meeting, near Smithfield, Ohio. The meeting is for business purposes. A correspondent says they have erected an immense tent and laid in a large stock of provisions, as if they intended considerable of a session.

—Hon. Reeder W. Clarke died at Bolivia, Claremont county, Ohio, yesterday, of dropsy. He was a member of Congress from the Sixth Ohio district from 1861 to 1868, was appointed third Auditor of the Treasury and afterward Supervisor of Internal Revenue for the Southern district of Ohio.

—Letters from Alleppo give a distressing picture of the state of Antioch. The town is now a mere heap of ruins, and as shocks of earthquake still continue, the soil shivering with the volcanic movement all around, the people are afraid to approach the site to remove the large number of dead who lie unburied.

—Farmer Garreston, of Cape May county, New Jersey, thinks he has discovered Captain Kidd's treasurers. While digging ditches on his farm, near Fishing Creek, he says he found a chest of gold coin, valued at $30,000. It is said that Captain Kidd's name was painted on the chest. That farm is bound to be entirely subsoiled.

—Judge McCunn has sent to New York Senate an answer to the charges against him. He says the Senate has no jurisdiction to try him on the charges, and further avers that the matter alleged in the charges do not constitute an offense for which the defendant is liable to removal under the constitution, and further respondent denies each and every allegation in the charges.

—A prudent father in Lowell, Ky., has found a way of removing objectionable members of his family circle, which is effective enough, but not to be encouraged on general principles. He placed a loaded pistol in the hands of his little son, aged seven years, and told him to shoot his half sister, a poor imbecile. The child did not hit the right sister, but the family circle was diminished to the same extent.

—People who are anxious to die might better not move to Durham, Conn., for there is something in that locality that leads to longevity. There is a specimen old lady there who lacks only one year of 100. During the last year only eight deaths occurred in the town in a population of 1100 and the average of the lives of the inhabitants was twice as great as in the State at large. Among other steady habits there, folks seem to have a steady habit of living.

—Think of a woman of 43 years of age, in Detroit, suing a boy of 19 for breach of promise of marriage! If a minor can make a contract of that kind, it will always be a suspicious one when the female party is over 40; nor will a jury give very stringent damages for the loss of a husband who in the eye of the law, is unable to make any of the ordinary contracts of bargain and sale, or to convey real property. A single woman at 43 is not supposed to be very susceptible to the tender passion, unless she is a fool; and so this Detroit woman ought to get no damages for the injury to her feelings. Such a case ought not to keep the least intelligent jury out more than forty-eight hours.

—The other afternoon some gentlemen, while prospecting for coal about a mile from Rockport, Kentucky, came upon the complete skeleton of a human body, gigantic in size. It was found about six feet below the surface of the earth. The forearm bone from elbow to wrist measured forty-two inches, and the thigh bone from the hip bone to the knee, measured forty-two inches. The lower jaw bone completely covered the whole lower portion of an ordinary-sized human face.

Official Notice to Mr. Greeley of the Liberal Republican nomination.

Hon. HORACE GREELEY, New York.

Mr. Greeley's Reply.

NEW YORK, May, 20, 1872.

GENTLEMEN: I have chosen not to acknowledge your letter of the 3d inst. until I could learn how the work of your Convention was received in all parts of our great country, and judge whether that work was approved and ratified by the mass of our fellow citizens. Their response has from day to day reached me through telegrams, letters, and the comments of journalists independent of official patronage and indifferent to the smiles or frowns of power. The number and character of these unconstrained, unpurchased, unsolicited utterances satisfy me that the movement which found expression at Cincinnati has received the stamp of public approval, and been hailed by a majority of our countrymen as the harbinger of a better day for the Republic.

I do not misinterpret this approval as especially complimentary to myself, nor even to the chivalrous and justly esteemed gentlemen with whose name I thank your Convention for associating mine I received and welcome it as a spontaneous and deserved tribute to that admirable Platform of principles, wherein your Convention so tersely, or lucidly, so forcibly, set forth the convictions which impelled and the purposes which guided its course a Platform which, casting behind it the wreck and rubbish of worn-out contentions and by-gone feuds, embodies in fit and few words the needs and aspirations of To-Day. Though thousands stand ready to condemn your every act, hardly a syllable of criticism or cavil has been aimed at your Platform, of which the substance may be fairly epitomized as follows:

I. All the political rights and franchises which have been acquired through our late bloody convulsion must and shall be guaranteed, maintained, enjoyed, respected, evermore.

II. All the political rights and franchises which have been lost through that convulsion should and must be promptly restored and reestablished so that there shall be henceforth no proscribed class and no disfranchised caste within the limits of our Union, whose long estranged people shall reunite and fraternize upon the broad basis of Universal Amnesty with Impartial Suffrage.

III. That, subject to our solemn constitutional obligation to maintain the equal rights of all citizens, our policy should aim at local self-government, and not at centralization; that the civil authority should be supreme over the military; that the writ of habeas corpus should be jealously upheld as the safeguard of personal freedom; that the individual citizens should enjoy the largest liberty consistent with public order; and that there shall be no Federal subversion of the internal polity of the several States and municipalities, but that each shall be left free to enforce the rights and promote the well-being of its inhabitants by such means as the judgement of its own people shall prescribe.

IV. There shall be a real and not merely a simulated Reform in the Civil Service of the Republic; to which end it is indispensable that the chief dispenser of its vast official patronage shall be shielded from the main temptation to use his power selfishly by a rule inexorably forbidding and precluding its reelection.

V. That the raising of Revenue, whether by Tariff or otherwise, shall be recognized and treated as the People's immediate business, to be shaped and directed by them through their Representative at Congress, whose action thereon the President must neither overrule by his veto, attempt to dictate, or presume to punish, by bestowing office only on those who agree with him or withdrawing it from those who do not.

VI. That the Pacific land must be sacredly reserved for occupation and aquisition by cultivators, and not squandered on the projectors of Railroads for which our people have no present need, and the premature construction of which is annually plunging us into deeper and deeper abysses of foreign indebtedness.

VII. That the achievement of these grand purposes of universal beneficence is expected and sought at the hands of all who approve them, irrespective of past affiliations.

VIII. That the public faith must at all hazards be maintained, and the National credit preserved.

IX. That the patriotic devotedness and inestimable services of our fellow-citizens, who, as soldiers or sailors, upheld the flag and maintained the unity of the Republic shall ever be gratefully remembered and honorably requited.

These propositions, so ably and forcibly presented in the Platform of your Convention, have already fixed the attention and commanded the assent of a large majority of our countrymen, who joyfully adopt them, as I do, as the bases of a true, beneficient National Reconstruction—of a New Departure from jealousies strifes, and hates, which have no longer adequate motive or even plausible pretext, into an atmosphere of Peace, Fraternity, and Mutual Good Will. In vain do the drill-sergeants of decaying organizations flourish menacingly their truncheons and angrily insist that the files shall be closed and straightened; in vain do the whippers-in of parties once vital because rooted in the vital needs of the hour protest against straying and bolting, denounce men now-wise their inferiors as traitors and renegades, and threaten them with infamy and ruin. I am confident that the American People have already made your cause their own, fully resolved that their brave hearts and strong arms shall bear it on to triumph. In this faith, and with the distinct understanding that, if elected, I shall be the President not of a party, but of the whole People, I accept your nomination, in the confident trust that the masses of our countrymen, North and South, are eager to clasp hands across the bloody chasm which has too long divided them, forgetting that they have been enemies in the joyful consciousness that they are and must henceforth remain brethern.

Yours, gratefully.

HORACE GREELEY.

To HON. CARL SCHURZ, and others.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Programme of the Liberals Foreshadowed—Grant to be Defeated by the "Liberalized Democracy.

A Philadelphia correspondent of the New York Herald writes as follows concerning an interview with Colonel A. K. McClure:—

With little ado I asked:—

"How are you satisfied with the work of the Cincinnati Convention?"

McClure—I was not one of those whose councils prevailed in the action of the convention. Two leading theories were pressed upon that body. One favored the selection of the candidate known to be most acceptable to the Democrats; the other insisted upon nominating the man who could command the largest Republican strength. I favored the first named policy, which confined me to Davis and Adams, and I supported Adams, who was the stronger of the two; but the other policy prevailed in the convention, and Mr. Greeley was undoubtedly the man, to fill the bill. At the time I doubted the wisdom of the policy that controlled the convention. It was an experiment; but, if successful, it promised overwhelming success, while the other policy I regarded as making a union of the opponents of Grant certain, and thereby removing all doubt as to success. But the developments of popular feeling since the ticket has been before the country have fully vindicated the wisdom of the policy that prevailed at Cincinnati; and I now doubt whether a nomination suggested by Democratic rather than Republican favor would have met the present emergency. There would have been but little Republican enthusiasm for either Davis or Adams, while a large majority of the Republicans of the nation and if the Democrats do not repeat the folly of the last ten years nearly or quite one-third of the Republican vote would be cast for him. I am therefore fully satisfied with the action of the convention, and believe that the very best nomination was made that could have been made.

REALLY PREFER GREELEY TO GRANT,

Correspondent—Do you believe the Democrats will accept the Cincinnati ticket?

McClure—As I have said, I had little hope of it the day the ticket was made, but now I am entirely confident that they will. It is evident that the whole South will demand it, and the West is decidedly for it. New England will be decided. Pennsylvania and New York will decide the matter in the Democratic Convention, and the Democrats of these States have too much at stake to commit suicide again. In this State the Democrats do not prefer Greeley, but the sober thought of their people will surely decide in favor of Greeley to overthrow Grant.—There is an important State ticket to elect, and the absolute political control of the State for some years to come is involved. In addition, the control of the Legislature involves the election of a United States Senator in place of Cameron, and the Constitutional Convention will belong to the successful party. A union of the opponents of Grant on national, State, and local tickets would carry everything by sweeping majorities, State ticket, Congressmen Legislature, and Convention, and thus transfer every department of power from the men who have sacrificed republicanism by selfish and arbitrary rule. This was done in Virginia, Tennessee, and Missouri, and will now be repeated in the national contest.

Correspondent—What would be the political effects of such a victory?

McClure—It is hard to tell just what the future of a union would be. The union on national and other tickets will not dissolve the Democratic party. It will maintain its distinct organization, and no one will be asked to be anything but what he prefers to be politically. It will, of course, end the old Republican party as at present organized, and the future of parties will depend on the wisdom with which the successful men shall govern. The union will be for the success of vital and national principles, on which liberal Republicans and Democrats thoroughly agree, and they would probably continue to act and to succeed as with all the errors of both the old parties buried in the past. The nation must have peace. It must have relief from carpet-bag governments, oppression, military rule, and centralization. It must have universal amnesty and the supremacy of the civil law, and it must have some measure of fitness and integrity in public officers. To accomplish this men will agree to act together, regardless of past differences or present political associations, and they will give to the country the blessings of free government and tranquility.

Correspondent—If Greeley is accepted by the republicans how would Pennsylvania vote?

McClure—Greeley would carry the State by not less than 70,000 majority. A few antediluvians would wrap themselves in their shrouds and wander around making ghostly complaints.—Some would fall into the Grant camp, as a few fossil Whigs dropped off to Buchanan in 1856; but the liberal men of both parties would give such a majority as has never been given before in the State.

Correspondent—Suppose the Democrats should nominate a straight out Democratic ticket, what would be the result?

McClure—Then the unwise leaders would be just what they ought to be if governed by such madness—hewers of wood and drawers of water for another decade. The most they could do would be to throw the election into the House, where Grant would be elected by a large majority of the States, and they would drive both branches of the Republican party to unite on Congressmen, Legislators, etc. Such a policy would end the Democratic party, for no considerable number of people would continue to follow such leaders, and a reorganization of parties would immediately follow Grant's re-election. Let me assure you that the future of politics is with the men who wear party collars very loosely just now.

Correspondent—Do you expect Greeley to carry the Southern States, generally?

McClure—The Southern States will vote almost a unit for Greeley or for Grant. If Greeley's election is possible he will carry every State South excepting South Carolina, and that will be doubtful. If a triangular contest comes, with no reasonable hope of Liberal Republican success, the South will vote for Grant. The Southern people are impoverished, prostrated, and crushed under the iron heel of military power, and if they do not see the way clear to throw off the Grant yoke, they will do the only thing left for them, conciliate the oppressor. They dare not allow Grant to be elected over them.

Correspondent—I see that Curtin is reported as for Grant; is it correct?

McClure—Governor Curtin has made no declaration on the Presidency, nor is any one authorized to speak for him. His resignation was sent to Washington fully three months ago, and he will return home in July to stay. Until he speaks for himself on the question no one can assume to commit him. You can rest assured that he will not be indifferent or silent in the contest, and when he speaks he will speak with power.

Correspondent—Is there any truth in the story that Borie went out with the power to tender the favor of the administration to him if he would enlist for Grant?

McClure—I do not know nor care. Governor Curtin is not trading in old clothes just now. If he supports Grant it will be from choice, and not because of any promise made to him. He does not return to seek office, but to retire from office.

Correspondent—You count Cameron as earnestly for Grant?

McClure—Yes; so, so. He hates Grant, and will be one of the first to leave the ship if it begins to sink.—He has the advantage of Grant in sagacity, and will not allow himself to be buried very deep if he can help it. He will back Grant as long as he is a winning nag—no longer. If Greeley is elected he will swear he was the first man in the country who named Greeley for President.

Correspondent—Why are the Grant leaders refusing to support Hartranft?

McClure—I do not understand them, nor do they seem to understand themselves. The Grant men insist that Hartranft is in the way of success, while the Hartranft men declare that Grant is the obstacle to harmony. The Hartranft men are right, but the Grant men have might on their side, and it looks as though they meant to render Hartranft's election impossible. If they do there will be a merry reckoning, but as the reckoning is likely to come anyhow, it's no matter about the side amusements.

Correspondent—Will the Liberal's nominate a State ticket.

McClure—I cannot speak for them, as the state committee has not met. I dont think, however, that the Liberal Republicans wish to amuse themselves in this fight by firing blank cartridges. I take it that they will vote so as to fell for every office from President down to Alderman. I am not much in favor of ORNAMENTAL POLITICS.

That is the property of boys and fools and I have got past the first, and hope to steer clear of the last. It would be folly to elect a President, and not carry United States Senators, Governors, Congressmen and Legislators in harmony with the national movement. The people want a new national departure, and they must carry every department of power to effect it.

This much information collected I took my departure, satisfied that McClure is in earnest in this fight, and, no matter what others may do, he will stick to the ticket that was born of the Cincinnati Convention, and should victory perch upon the banners of "our late Franklin," McClure's reward will be certain, and in keeping with the services he shall have rendered his new chieftain.

After the Battle.

EDITOR ARGUS: The Senatorial contest, in this county, so far as the "nomination" is concerned, is over and I am beaten; and now that shameless misrepresentation will be of no more service, and as I am far more interested in maintaining my consistency than in securing office, I desire to correct, at least, one of the many falsehoods of the brief campaign. During the canvass it was very freely represented that I had gone back on my Temperance record, and persons were induced to vote for Mr. Rutan "as a better Temperance man than Mr. Dravo." I did not, of course, claim to be a Temperance man, but as a Republican. Nevertheless, I did not "go back on my Temperance record." From boyhood up to the present I have been a devoted friend of the great & good cause of Temperance. At an early period I was, in conviction, a prohibitionist; but for several years I have been a convert to local option—the outgrowth of modern discussion and thought—and, therefore, substituted, in my temperance creed, Local Option for Prohibition.

1st. Because a law that is not sustained and enforced by popular sentiment is worse than no law.

2d. Popular sentiment is not now sufficiently enlightened or advanced to sustain or enforce a State Prohibitory law.

3d. Local Option is thoroughly Democratic, in accord with the genius of our institutions, resting upon the will of the majority.

4th. The educated temperance sentiment of a community or commonwealth that carries Local Option will enforce it.

5th. the periodical discussions and organized effort to carry Local Option, will keep the masses educated up to the required standard.

6th. Local Option is virtually Prohibition in essence, for when all the wards, boroughs and townships of any State elect Local Option, the traffic in intoxicating liquors is necessarily prohibited. But Local Option, to be successful, must commence in the smaller communities of wards, boroughs and townships—COUNTY Local Option is a fraud and cheat—was to me indecent; although true to the temperance whale, while the wily politician secures the support of the liquor trade, on the grounds that the law is of no avail, as the temperance men cannot carry the county. Such was the argument in the late contest.

ANOTHER MATTER—"FREE SPEECH" NOT STRAITED.—When I consented to suffer my name to be presented to the Republicans of Beaver county as a candidate for Senatorial nomination, it was with the understanding that I had neither time nor disposition to make a personal canvass of the county, interviewing each individual voter, nor as there anything in the position honestly filled, to justify such an expenditure of time or money; but voters naturally wanted to see the candidates and hear their views, when, therefore, it was suggested that a series of night meetings be held, at which my competitor and myself should address the people, in my Republican simplicity and admiration of "Free Speech" I accepted the proffer as more dignified and manly and certainly more economical of time and means. I regret to say that my competitor did not agree with me as to the course to be pursued, and to my utter astonishment I found Republicans going back on what I have regarded as a fundamental doctrine of our organization—"Free Speech." At New Brighton Beaver Falls, and other places, greater or less extent manifested, which, however, found its culmination in South Beaver township. A request from a very respectable source, obtained my consent to speak in that township Friday evening, the 25th. The sky accordingly unveil. I left Beaver Friday afternoon; driving some eleven or twelve miles to company with a friend, we reached the appointed place a little late.

I immediately saw signs which recalled to mind the struggles of the early friends of Republicanism, to obtain a hearing before the people. Some considerable delay and difficulty were experienced in getting the school house opened; however we finally succeeded in getting in, obtaining lights and making due arrangements. All things being ready, the crowd was invited in the crowd came in—the meeting was organized, a President and Secretary elected and immediately a motion made to adjourn, which motion, of course, according to previous arrangement, carried, and the meeting adjourned with a hurrah for Rutan. When the unexpected motion to adjourn was made I asked the privilege to open discussion was to a legge of a word of explanation, but that was not in order, as the President decided it was not "parliamentary" to speak on a motion to adjourn. I of course accepted the "situation" and adjourned for, returned to Beaver and dreamed of "bleeding Kansas." Such is a specimen of Beaver county Republicanism, or at least a sample of some of its supporters. I am sorry to confess that I have found at various points a party despotism and terror that seeks to crush open and manly action—a political serfdom repugnant to the independence of freemen. It may be a good way to nominate candidates, in this instance it was a success—but in the matter of settling them. One word by way of suggestion, and that is, when the time comes for Mass Meetings, with Flags unfurled and Banners waving, that the Ward Committees of New Brighton see to it that no Banner has on it the old motto, that in former days so stirred patriotic blood, "Free Speech."

JOHN F. DRAVO.

Miss Frazier has on hand and is constantly receiving all the first styles in Bonnets, Hats, Flowers, Ribbons, &c. She has also Dolly Varden pins and cuffs, and all kinds of fancy articles, Corsets, Gloves, Hosiery, Handkerchiefs, Collars, Undersleeves, and in fact everything usually kept in a first class trimming store may 29:tf

Drowned.—Information was received in Pittsburgh, on Thursday last, of the drowning of four men in the Monongahela river, Mill's Station. Mr. John T. Meller had engaged twelve men to work on the Pittsburgh, Virginia and Charleston Railroad, opposite Mill Station, about ten miles from the city. He started with the men at eleven o'clock Friday morning on the McKeesport accommodation. At Mill Station they left the train to cross the river. Mr. Meller, with five other men got into the skiff with all of their baggage. This loaded the boat almost to the waters edge, and when within about fifteen yards of the shore, the skiff sank. Meller and one of his men succeeded in swimming to the shore, but the other four men were drowned. The names of the men could not be ascertained, and nothing further in regard to the sad accident could be learned.

A CONTEST.—On Friday, May 24, the Wheeler & Wilson agent took a machine to Mt. Washington, to the house of Mr. Lewis Good. Mr. Good had bought an Elliptic Machine and made his first payment on it, but as the agent for the W. & W had misrepresented the Elliptic by asserting that it could not do the same work as his machine, he had agreed to buy a Wheeler & Wilson and return the Elliptic. The agents for both machines met at the house, and the Wheeler & Wilson challenged the Elliptic to a trial. It was accepted, and the issue was to be decided by Mr. and Mrs. Good. After a thorough trial they decided to keep the Elliptic Machine and allow the discomfitted agent of the W. & W. to haul his machine back to the office.

THE NEW BISHOPS.

Brief Biographical Sketches.

The Methodist Episcopal General Conference has concluded perhaps the most important, as it was certainly the most interesting business before it, the electing of eight new Bishops. The selections made give evidence that care was exercised in making a choice, and have silenced the fears of those who were apprehensive that eight men fitted for the Episcopacy could hardly be chosen at once. The selections are generally wise and give satisfaction.

BISHOP BOWMAN.

The Rev. Thomas Bowman, D. D., is a native of Berwick, Pa., and is now fifty-three years of age. He graduated with honor at Dickinson College, and for a brief period thereafter was a teacher in the Institution. In 1839 he left that position and joined the Baltimore Conference. He traveled several years but was compelled to give up ministerial labors in the pulpit, from a disease in the throat. In 1840 he was elected President of Dickinson Seminary, at Williamsport, an institution for boys and girls. He resigned that after ten years of service, to re-enter the pastorate, but was immediately elected President of Indiana Asbury University, which position he filled until called to the Episcopate. President Bowman is well known as a pulpit orator. His sermons are plain, practical and lucid. In person he is of about medium size, compactly built and pleasant featured. He is plain in his attire, and modest and unobtrusive in his manners.

BISHOP HARRIS.

The Rev. Wm. L. Harris, D. D., was born in Ohio, in November; 1817; and became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in his 17th year. Two years after he was licensed to preach, and the next year he joined the Ohio Conference, and spent ten years in the pastoral work. He was then elected president of the Baldwin Institute, and after three years' service resigned to accept a professorship in the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio. In 1860, he was elected Assistant Missionary Secretary, which office he has held to the present time. He was first elected to the General Conference in 1856, and never failed to be returned since. At the first session he was elected Secretary of the Conference, and re-elected at every subsequent session. He is a fine specimen of vigorous manhood, nearly six feet high, well built with courteous manners, and social habits that make him a great favorite.

BISHOP FOSTER.

The Rev. Randolph S. Foster, D. D., was born in Clermont county, Ohio, in 1820. Converted in early life, he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church, joining the Ohio Conference in 1837. In 1850 he was transferred to the New York Conference, and spent 18 years in the pastoral work. When the Drew Theological Seminary was established at Madison New Jersey, he was elected one of the Professors, and at the death of Dr. McClintock, President of that institution, he was elected to fill the vacant position, which he still occupies. He is an author of distinction on theological subjects, and has written a number of volumes that are now standard authorities. Few ministers excel Dr. Foster in preaching. Without having popular qualities as a speaker, he rarely fails to command the close attention of a congregation, and to interest and instruct them. In person he is tall and imposing and when speaking he is dignified and graceful.

BISHOP WILEY.

The Rev. Isaac W. Wiley, D. D., is a Pennsylvanian by birth, and in the 47th year of his age. At the age of thirteen he was converted. In 1846 he graduated in Medicine, but joined the Philadelphia Conference in 1849, and in the next year sailed for China as a missionary, returning to this country in 1854. Immediately after his return he entered upon pastoral work, and four years afterward was elected President of Pennington Seminary, in New Jersey, and held that position two years. In May, 1864, he was elected editor of the Ladies' Repository, published at Cincinnati, and he has filled that position until the present day. He is regarded as an excellent preacher and platform speaker. In person he is of medium hight, slender build, and compact form, and is pleasing in his address.

BISHOP MERRILL.

The Rev. Stephen M. Merrill, D. D., is a native of Ohio, and was born in Sept. 1825. In his 21st year he was received into the Ohio Conference. By study he rapidly rose, and was finally appointed Presiding Elder. All his ministerial life, except four years, has been spent as an itinerant preacher. When important questions were agitating the church some years ago he wrote papers which gave indications of matured ability. In 1868 he was elected editor of the Western Christian Advocate, published at Cincinnati. He preaches with power, and occasions have occurred in his pulpit ministrations when he has exhibited signal ability. He is quite tall, rather grave and dignified in bearing, and a favorite in social circles.

BISHOP ANDREWS.

Rev. E. G. Andrews is probably the least known of any who have been chosen. He is about forty-two years of age, a graduate of Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Connecticut, and was for some years President of the Seminary at Cazenovia, New York. He is now pastor of one of the most prominent Methodist churches of Brooklyn. His special support came from the laity. He never was a General Conference officer, but his forte is said to be of an executive character.

BISHOP HAVEN.

Few people who have kept themselves posted with the current religious literature of the day, will need to be told much of Rev. Gilbert Haven. He is now editor of Zion's Herald, Boston. He is also a graduate of the Wesleyan University at Middletown, Conn., and for some years filled the Principal's chair at the Amenia, (New York) Seminary. He is one of the most brilliant writers in the Methodist Church.

His paper is the leading Methodist Journal of New England, and he has made it an influential and powerful weapon in the interests of the Church, and at the same time has always spoken through it with clearness and vigor on all the political issues of the day. He has been editor of the Herald for about four years. In other days he was a radical Abolitionist. About ten years since Mr. Haven lost his wife, and has never married again.

BISHOP PECK.

Rev. Jesse Truesdell Peck was born in Middlefield, Otsego county, New York, April 4, 1811. He never enjoyed a collegiate education, but studied under his brother, Rev. George Peck, D. D., and by close application gained a front rank in scholarship. He commenced preaching in 1832 and after four years of a pastorate, became Principal of the Seminary at Gouvenor, New York, where he spent four years. He then removed to the Troy Conference Academy at West Poultney, Vt., and spent seven years. He left this to take the Presidency of Dickinson College and in two years resigned this Presidency to enter the regular ministerial work. He spent two more years in the ministry at Washington, D. C. Then he became editor of the True Wesleyan of the Church; subsequently spent three years as pastor of Greene street church, New York; went to California and stayed eight years filling many important positions, and finally, on his return, organized the Syracuse University, and became President of the Board of Trustees—a position which he now holds. He has written a number of volumes on church and secular history, and is regarded in the literary world as a man of mark. His age was somewhat against him with the delegates, but his abilities overcame that objection.

THE FULL BOARD

All of these are effective in the work save Bishops Morris and Scott.

THE STEAMER VIRGINIUS.

Official Report of Lieut. Com. White in regard to Her Escape from the Spanish at Aspinwall—Brave Conduct of the officers and Crew of the Kansas.

A special from Washington gives the official report to the Navy Department of Lieutenant Commander White, of the United States steamship Kansas, in relation to the departure of the steamer Virginius from the harbor of Aspinwall, and the means taken by his vessel to enforce respect for the flag under which the Virginius sailed. The following are extracts: "The American Consul having informed me that there was no cause whatever for the detention of the Virginius, and that he had shiped her crew that day, and that her papers would be all ready at an early hour the next morning, 26th inst., I therefore came on board the ship, and as soon as night set in, cleared the ship for action and loaded the battery. This I did under the cover of darkness, for the reason that I thought it best to make no demonstration which might lead the commander of the Pizarro to believe preparations were being made for hostile intent, for the reason that they were precautionary measures merely, and I did not desire to do anything which he might construe as mere bravado. During the next morning, 26th inst., preparations for sea were clearly visible on board the Virginius. Her motions were closely followed by the Pizarro. Both vessels were getting up steam, and their boats were hoisted. The rifle pivot of the Pizarro, mounted on the mortar-deck, was pointed on the Virginius as well as her two starboard broadside guns. I therefore sent the men quietly to quarters, making no display above the rail, leither showing a crew at the rifled twenty pounder at the forecastle, nor making a display of the marine guards on the poop deck; served out an ample supply of ammunition for the smallarms and pistols, and inspected carefully all arrangements for supplying powder and fighting the guns; made preparations for shipping and buoying cable. This being done I caused the men to leave their quarters, their belts, equipped, to be deposited at the guns ready for use at a moment's notice. At five minutes to two p. m. the Virginius got under weigh. At the same moment we slipped our chain, went to quarters and cast loose the battery and sanded down the decks fore and aft. The Virginius immediately took up a position on our port bow. We steamed ahead so as to bring the Pizarro on our star oard quarter. In this relative position the two vessels proceeded to sea, the Virginius being about two cables' lengths ahead, and the Pizarro three cables' lengths off our starboard quarter. The Kansas stayed by the Virginius until the Pizarro was some five miles astern, and then returned to the harbor. I cannot conclude this report without expressing to you with what pride I looked on the officers and men of this vessel as we steamed out of the harbor,

A Yankee map peddler has been delighting everybody but his immediate victims in the region of the Green Mountains, by a strikingly original plan for evading his tavern bills. His plan is to stop at a farm house and ask for a night's lodging and food for himself and horse. When his bill is presented in the morning he astonishes the farmer by asking to see his license to keep a tavern! The document not being produced, he reserves his stamps, and proceeds on his way, until the approach of night affords an opportunity of enlightening another victim concerning the laws which regulate tavern licenses.

Something About Babies.—Talk about babies! We always loved a baby—not any of your sour, suspicious, squalling specimens, but a bright, rosy, dimpled thing, full of fun and frolic, running over with glee, and of such a confiding, unsuspecting disposition as not to refuse to go to anybody. What can be more refreshing in this busy, tiresome world, than an occasional romp with a baby? A letting down as it were of the chord of mind until it vibrates in unison with a baby's, and then holding a confidential chat, in real baby vernacular. Then to have a couple of white, fat arms thrown about your neck, and a pair of rosy lips, fresh as rosebuds are the dews have left them, presented for a kiss. The man who can think of it without a softening of the heart and a watering of the mouth, is no better than the swine before whom the pearls are cast, and we hope he may never be blessed with a baby—or if he is, let him be a kicking pugilistic baby, one skilled in the art of gouging, who takes delight in running his thumb into your eye, and is always trying to obtain a lock of your hair by a more summary and unceremonious process than clipping.

THE CAUSE of Temperance finds some of its most insidious and dangerous foes in the many so-called "tonics" and "appetizers," made of cheap whisky and refuse liquors, finished up to suit depraved appetites, under the name of medicines. Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are no such thing. They are not a beverage, but a genuine medicine, purely vegetable, prepared from California herbs by a regular physician. For all diseases of the stomach, liver, kidneys, bladder, skin and blood, they are an infallible and unrivalled remedy. mays,4w.

POLITICAL.—Successful or unsuccessful candidates for office, at the recent primary election, would do well to have their photographs taken at Noss gallery, New Brighton—the first, because the subject would make a pleasing picture, every lineament of feature expressive of the utmost complacency and satisfaction—the latter to test the power of his art in depicting the expressions of disgust and disappointment. There could be no more perfect test of the truthfulness and life like power of the artist than these would afford. Try him on, so that you can say to your children, in the language of John Rogers:

"I leave you here a little Phot,
For you to look upon,
That you may see your father's face,
When he is dead and gone."

Fires.—On Saturday morning, about two o'clock, the portable steam saw mill, formerly owned by Josiah Strickler, situated near Mount Pleasant, was discovered on fire, and before the flames could be subdued was damaged to the amount of six hundred dollars. The cause is attributed to the work of an incendiary. No clue to the perpetrator.

A frame stable belonging to Soxman, was burnt in Latrobe one day last week. The activity and promptness of the citizens prevented it from spreading.

On Wednesday morning of last week about 10 o'clock, a house owned by Harrison Baker of Latrobe, and occupied by Joseph Brant, near Youngstown, was totally destroyed by fire. Both the father and mother were away from home at the time, but the children had sense enough to clear the house of themselves when they saw the fire, one of which was carried by the others from the cradle. The loss of the occupants was complete, but through the goodness of their neighbors they have been well provided for. The fire no doubt originated by carelessness, but there are suspicions attached elsewhere.—Frank Cowan.

Farmer's Boys.—An intelligent and thrifty farmer tells us in a few words how he has kept his boys at home and made farm life not only endurable but attractive to the youngsters. The lesson is well worth heeding. He says: "But for the co-operation of my boys I should have failed. The eldest is nearly twenty-one, and the other boys in the neighborhood younger, have left their parents; mine have stuck to me when I most needed their services. I attribute this result to the fact that I have tried to make home pleasant for them. I have furnished them with attractive and useful reading; and when night comes, and the day's work is ended, instead of running with other boys to the railroad station and adjoining towns, they gather around the great lamp, and become interested in their books and papers."

THE attention of our readers, the ladies in particular, is directed to the fine new stock of Millinery Goods, Trimmings, Fancy Goods, Summer Shawls, &c., which are just opening at Bence's, the old stand, Beaver, Hats, Bonnets, Ribbons, and Flowers of every style in the market. This stock, for excellence and variety, has never been equaled in this place. It is of so attractive a character, that our fair readers will not fail to appreciate it. Those who are economical in their views will find at Bence's an excellent stock of goods at low prices: in fact the prices at this establishment are remarkably low, and those who would avail themselves of these should not delay. mn29;2w.

NEVER GIVE UP.

Never give up! it is wisest and best
Always to hope than once to despair;
Throw off the load of doubt's cankering fetter,
And break the dark spell of tyrannical care.
Never give up! or the burthen may sink you,
Providence kindly has mingled the cup,
And in all troubles or trials bethink you,
The watchword of life should be, Never give up.

Never give up! there are chances and changes
Helping the hopeful a hundred to one,
And mid the chaos, high wisdom arranges
Ever success—if you'll only hope on.
Never give up! for the wisest is boldest,
Knowing that hope's radiance mingles the cup,
And of all maxims the best as the oldest
Is the true watchword of—Never give up.

Never give up! though the grape shot may rattle,
And the full thunder cloud over you burst,
Stand like a rock and the storm or the battle
Little can harm you, though doing their worst.
Never give up! it adversity presses
Providence wisely has mingled the cup,
And the best counsel in all your distresses
Is the stout watchword of—Never give up.

Republican Convention.—The annual convention of the Republicans of the county was held in the Court House in Beaver on Monday last. Dr. W. C. Shurlock was made president of the Convention, and J. F. Miner of New Brighton, Oscar Small of Bridgewater, Secretaries. The result of the vote on the preceding Saturday will be found elsewhere in the Argus. After the result was announced W. S. Shallenberger esq. of Rochester was elected permanent chairman of the county committee, and H. R. Moore esq. Secretary. The resolutions and official proceedings will appear in our next issue.

Associate Judge—M. Lawrence.

Reg. & Recorder—James I. Stokes.

P. H. Director—John White.

Serious Accident.—Last week a little son of Isaac Morgan, of Brighton township, this county, while playing with other children, upset a wheel of a threshing machine upon himself, breaking his arm in two places, and bruising it severely. His bones were set and wounds dressed by Dr. M'Nutt, of this borough, and he is doing as well as could be expected.

Force of Example.—The poor woman, who with a scanty wardrobe, is ever neat and clean in her person; amidst various and trying duties, is patient; gentle and affectionate in her domestic relations; with small funds is economical and judicious in her household management, is presenting every day a practical exposition of some of the best lessons in life, may be a greater benefactress of her kind than the woman of fortune in alms. The poor man, whose regularity and sobriety of conduct cooperate with a woman, and shame his fellow workman and townsmen in what temperance, industry, manly tenderness and superiority to low, sensual temptation can effect in endearing a home which, like the green spot that the traveler finds in the desert, is bright even amid all the gloom of poverty, and sweet even amid all the surrounding bitterness—such a man does good as well as the most eloquent writer that ever wrote.

EVERY one agrees upon this point—that Mr. M. Schiff, of New Brighton, is selling this season, all kinds of Dry Goods and Notions at a lower price than ever before, and not another merchant in this neighborhood has attempted to undersell him in any article.

Don't Fret.—What is the use for men to talk, and trouble their minds about things when it does no good? Farmers especially make a great ado when the prospect for wheat, corn or oats is not as they think it might be. Since everything is for the best, why find fault with the workings of nature? There is plenty to eat and wear, and what more do you need? You have your farms, have some land to pay for, and if crops fail I shall not be able to make both ends meet." Well, if you have a debt, does the worrying pay it? Where there is no money men can not get any.

MR. M. SCHIFF is still selling some of that good Gingham at 12½ cents, per yard, also, splendid yard wide bleached and unbleached Muslin at 12½ cents per yard; the latest style in Plaids and Mohair dress goods at 25 cents per yard, good linen Handkerchiefs, 4 for 25 cents, plain and ribbed ladies' Hose at 10 cents per pair, Parasols from 20 cents up, and all other goods at the lowest cash prices.

The prospects for an abundant crop of almost all kinds of fruit are better now than for a number of years past. Peaches, apricots, plums, pears and apples have passed safely through the winter, escaped the spring frosts, and are generally loaded with fruit. Grapes and raspberries seem to have suffered seriously during the winter. Many old grapevines are entirely killed and many more seriously damaged. Raspberry canes have suffered serious injury and many of the tenderer varieties where they have not been protected have been entirely killed.

IMPORTANT TO HOUSEKEEPERS.—It may not be generally known that "The Baker" Cooking Stove, manufactured by the Beaver Falls Co-operative Foundry Association, is the best cooking stove now made.

"The Baker" has become extremely popular with the housekeepers for the following reasons:

It is made from the best A No. 1 foundry metal.

It is made by first class mechanics.

It has an extremely neat and beautiful design, and is easily kept clean.

It combines all merited improvements.

It is durable and operates perfectly.

It takes less fuel for the same work than any other cooking stove.

It can be purchased cheaper than any other cooking stove offered to the public.

If any of our readers design going to Pittsburgh to purchase clothing, it would pay them to refrain from doing so until they have investigated the advantages and disadvantages attending such a course. It is certainly a ruinous practice and one that is a folly for our citizens to indulge in, and we hope that for the credit of our town and for the sake of sustaining home interests it will be discontinued. By a little attention and investigation, purchasers will be convinced that it is to their own interest to buy at home. The firm of Bert & Walsh, Broadway, New Brighton, for instance, make clothing quite equal in all respects to any made in Pittsburgh, and at much lower figures than the same can be bought there. They have just received another new line of cassimeres, diagonals, cheviots, &c., &c., which they will make to order in the latest styles and at the lowest possible prices. They have also on hand a large stock of hats, caps, and gents' furnishing goods generally, which they are selling at reduced prices.

"Our Digestion: or, My Jolly Friend's Secret," is the happy title of Dio Lewis' latest and most important work. It is well calculated to do good service in promoting the health of the people, and deserves a wide circulation. The very reading of the book will tend to make one wiser and jollier, for the doctor writes with great directness and lively vivacity, and a due infusion of humor, playfulness, and anecdote, which are sure to render the work attractive and universally popular. It ought to supersede Buchan's and every other "Domestic Medicine," as a household book; for it shows how medicine may be dispensed with, to a considerable extent, in a majority of cases. We confidently believe this book will save thousands of doctors' bills, if its wisdom be heeded. It solves the problem of cheap living, and will thus "if read by the many bless the million". It teaches us how to live so that we need never be troubled with "the blues," or suffer with billiousness or dyspepsia. It tells how to manage so that you shall have white teeth, sweet breath, strong muscles, good spirits, refreshing sleep and long life. This is the nature of the secret of our jolly friend, and is really worth many times the price asked for the book. Buy it, and study its invaluable information and receipts, is our advice to all. We are informed that the book is to be sold entirely by agents, and in our opinion they are seldom offered a better chance to make money rapidly, than the sale of this low-priced practical book will afford. We advise all seeking profitable employment to write without delay, to the publisher, Geo. Maclean, 733 Sansom Street, Philadelphia.

The Eloping Bigamist.—A few weeks ago we related how a gay young man, who had married a wife in Ann Arbor, Michigan, came to this city, wedded a respectable young woman on the South Side, and set up a boarding house on Wylie avenue, and how, on receiving letters from his legal wife, he became uneasy, and finally eloped with his second wife's sister, leaving sundry bills unsettled in this city. The New York Dispatch gives the sequel to this story, narrating the arrival there of wives No. 1 and No. 2, and their discovery of the object of their search in a private boarding house on Twenty-fourth street. The young man had run out of means and was working at a dental establishment in that city. The meeting of the two sisters is graphically described, the "runaway" having fallen fainting into her injured sister's arms. The names given by the young man to the police, after his arrest, are evidently fictitious, and we withhold them for the present. The matter will go before Court for investigation. Several parties here will pay their respects to the young man should he be brought on to this city.—Pitts. Commercial.

Dreary Homes.—Of all the dreary places, deliver us from the dreary farm house which so many people call home. Bars for a front gate; chickens wallowing before the door; pig pens elbowing the house in the rear; scraggy trees never cared for, or no trees at all; no flowering shrubs; no neatness, no trimness. And yet a lawn, and trees, and a neat wall, and a pleasant porch, and a plain fence around, all do not cost a great deal. They can be secured little by little, at odd times, and the expense hardly felt. And if ever the time comes when it is best to sell the farm, fifty dollars so invested will often bring back five hundred. For a man is a brute who will not insensibly yield to a higher price for such a farm when he thinks of the pleasant surroundings it offers his wife and children.

Concerning the prevalence of nervous complaints, an exchange says:

Physicians generally state that nervous complaints have never been more frequent than they are throughout the country at the present time. Men are suffering from nervous exhaustion, and women from hysterics and extreme depression of spirits. The explanation is that during the cold, dry weather of February and March, the atmosphere was surcharged with electricity to a great degree. The system was thus stimulated to an unusual extent, and the warm, damp days of April, in which the atmosphere was almost destitute of electricity, following after the dry and cold days of the preceding months, produced a feeling of nervous exhaustion such as the hard drinker feels when he breaks away from his evil habits for a few days. It needs a few days of clear, sharp weather, such as we shall not probably get, to restore the equilibrium, and bring about a state of physical good feeling.

Boiler Explosion.—On Thursday last one of the boilers attached to the steam saw mill of S. C. Work, in Hopewell township, exploded with a tremendous report, and almost totally demolished the engine house. The mill was being run at the time by Thos. Armstrong and Henry M'Allister, but at the time of the explosion, they had left the mill to assist Mr. W. Smiley to drop a new log which he had brought, and this doubtless saved their lives. As it turned out no one was injured. The boiler was an old one, and was shown to be defective, as there was a full supply of water in it at the time and but a small head of steam.—Washington Reporter.

Sheep Killed.—On Saturday night, 11th inst., dogs killed fifty lambs and five ewes belonging to Samuel Skiles, of Charlies township, Washington county.

How to Make Tea.—Tea can not be properly made from water that has been boiling long. Cold water must be put in the kettle, adding the tea at the moment of ebullition, and not a minute after. It might also be pointed out that the practice of measuring tea in spoons is a mistaken one, as the strength of the infusion depends on the weight; and a few larger or smaller leaves make a wonderful difference in the quantity contained in a teaspoon, and consequently in the strength of the infusion.

Something for Shoppers.—Whatever you buy, purchase only those articles which are really good. A few dollars judiciously spent will go farther than double the amount in the hands of a careless and inexperienced shopper. Do not be misled by mere showy cheap finery, and showy but flimsy goods, because they are cheaper than those which appear plainer. If you can afford but one dress, have that of good material. If a rich dress with costly trimmings be beyond your means, instead of buying a cheap material and a quantity of showy fringe, purchase a good substantial article, and make it without trimmings. It may be plain but it is sure to be ladylike, and may easily possess the merits of simple elegance.

FALLSTON, May 24th, 1872.

JACOB WEYAND, ESQ.:

As you have copied from the Pittsburgh Gazette of the 16th inst., an art cle in which I am grossly and falsely assailed, I ask, as an act of simple justice, that you give place in the columns of the ARGUS the response indorsed herewith, cut from the Gazette of the 23d inst.

Respectfully Yours,
WM. HENRY.

LETTER FROM HON. JUDGE AGNEW.

HARRISBURG, May 20th, 1872.

WILLIAM HENRY, Esq.:

Dear Sir:—I have received your letter of the 17th, enclosing an article cut from the Pittsburgh Gazette entitled, "Who are Bolters?" and requesting a statement from me as to certain matters contained in it. I regret this call very much. Not that I am unwilling to do justice to an old and valued friend, but because of the causes which have led to this appeal, and of the necessity which forces me into a position I would avoid in view of the place I fill. You will excuse me therefore if I make my answers brief, and confine them to that which is personally known to me.

The article referred to contains this passage: "Wm. Henry, six years ago, was overwhelmingly beaten in this county for the nomination of State Senator. Instead of acquiescing like a true man, he listened to the seductive words of Wm. Montgomery, to become an independent Democratic candidate, and had it not been for a gentleman holding a seat on the Supreme Bench, who in full view, and in the hearing of scores of Democrats and Republicans passing and repassing on the streets, literally thrashed the insane idea out of his mind he would have entered himself wholly away to those who were ready to take back rebels with open arms."

The foregoing statement evidently refers to me. So far as it does, it is incorrect in language and spirit. The facts are these: You were coming from the direction of Hall's Hotel toward my house. I had been told that you had gone to that hotel to meet Montgomery and his friends were, and were then said to be rumored by persons then unfriendly to your interests, you were conferring with them upon schemes injurious to the Republican ticket. Seeing you coming, I determined as an old friend to interrogate you, and if there was any foundation for the report, to dissuade you from any such alliance. You told me you had been sent for to come to the hotel. That you found Montgomery and others there. That the subject of the Senate was mentioned, and you were offered the Democratic vote if you would run, but that you had not accepted, and did not intend to. Without undertaking to give all that was said this was the purport of the whole matter. We had a long conversation, some of which related to collateral matters, and in part of it I stated my views of such alliances as the one imputed. I did not then, and I have not since believed there was any just foundation for the charge, further than the unfriendless created out of the visit to the hotel.

The conversation occurred between ourselves, apart from all others, in the public square, under the oak tree in front of my house. I remember no passers-by—no one was near enough to the hearing of scores of Democrats and Republicans, but was in private, and could not have been easily heard by any one; and no such account of the conversation, as that given in the extract above, has ever been given by me.

There is another passage in the article to which you call my attention, as one of the "others" referred to. I am not sure of the reference to me, nor do I know exactly what circumstance is referred to. I therefore prefer not to reply to a matter in which I might commit a mistake. I can only say in general terms that I have known you well and intimately for more than forty years, and I have never known a fact or circumstance reflecting upon your personal integrity, or detracting from your standing as a consistent member of the old Whig, and the present Republican party. It would require more than ordinary evidence to contradict the uniform tenor of a life so well and so long known to me. I am truly your friend,

DANIEL AGNEW.

STATEMENT OF H. MENDENHALL.

My attention has been called to a communication in the Pittsburgh Gazette of the 16th instant, signed "Fair Play," in which, among other things, it is charged that in the year 1866, Wm. Henry, Esq., of Fallston, Beaver county, "listened to the seductive words of Wm. Montgomery, to become an independent Democratic candidate" for the State Senate, "and was ready to barter himself away to those willing to take back the rebels with open arms."

As I was present at the affair referred to, that is to say at the National Hotel in Beaver, at the September Court of 1866, I am free to say, I know the charge to be a gross misrepresentation; and as far as Mr. Henry's expression and apparent feeling at that time are concerned, is entirely void of truth. I heard every word uttered at that interview, which lasted probably twenty minutes and every expression and indication of Mr. Henry was just the reverse of that attributed to him by the correspondent of the Gazette. When Mr. Henry was introduced to Mr. Montgomery (which interview was certainly not sought by the former) Mr. M. immediately opened on politics, spoke of his knowledge of the widespread dissatisfaction amongst Republicans of this county with the Senatorial nomination—that if Mr. H. would run as an independent Republican candidate he would give him every Democratic vote in the district, and guarantee his election. Said Mr. M., "I will vote for you, and I do not ask you to vote for me." Mr. Henry responded, that he had been a candidate for the Republican Senatorial nomination; had been a pretty decided party man, his life business necessarily making him so—always zealous for maintaining party rules—that he had nothing now to yield of Republicanism for any purpose, and could not enter tain the proposition. He was aware, he said of Republican dissatisfaction, but he was in no way or degree responsible for it; then leaving the room, and those present, with the distinct understanding that he would not be an independent candidate. The fact that he did not run stands in corroboration. The Senatorial question was the only one referred to whilst Mr. Henry was present.

H. MENDENHALL.

New Brighton, May 20.

LETTER FROM HON. JOHN ALLISON.

WASHINGTON CITY, May 18, 1872.

WM. HENRY, Esq., Dear Sir:

Yours of the 16th instant, calling my attention to an article published in the Pittsburgh Gazette of same date, under head of "Who are Bolters?" in which the writer is pleased to review the history of some past campaign in Beaver county, as now before me, and I hasten to reply.

You ask me to state my recollection in regard to the charge made that "you and others sought to crush the Argus because the editors would not join them in a fusion with the Democrats in opposition to the regular ticket." This seems to refer to the campaign of 1854. Some time during that canvass, I was informed by my friends that certain leading politicians of Beaver had made various threats in regard to the "Argus," but I do not remember that your name was ever associated with those that were hostile to my election; but on the contrary, I believed then, and since, that you were my friend and anxious for my election. At every time that I was a candidate I received your cordial support. Our relations for many years were intimate and cordial, and I do not remember an occasion when you faltered in the support of the nominee of the party. As a Whig and as a Republican, as long as I resided in the county I ever found you true and loyal to your party, and I know of no event in our long acquaintance that reflects discredit upon your loyalty as a pet tician, or that detracts from your character as a high-minded and honorable man. I would regret to see injustice done you by the misrepresentation of matters long past.

Yours, &c.,
JOHN ALLISON.

A Poor Refutation.

MR. EDITOR: I observe in the Pittsburgh Gazette of the 23d inst., letters from Messrs. Agnew, Allison and Mendenhall, exonerating Mr. Wm. Henry from certain political delinquencies charged by his correspondent "Fair Play." It strikes me that some of the letters leave him really in nearly as bad a plight as your correspondent left him. As "Fair Play" has not seen fit to make any reply, and as some things have not been made clear to my comprehension, I would like information, on the following points: Were not the various newspaper assaults made upon Col. Allison and his colleagues in the memorable contest to which he refers, furnished the printers in the sanctum of Mr. Henry? If he was in sympathy with the sentiments contained in those bitter articles—as he was clearly understood to be at the time—how has Allison been laboring under a great delusion these many years, that he had always been his friend? Did Mr. Henry, or did he not, receive the appointment by the next mail that year, and shortly after the appearance of these fulminations against the candidates of his own party, drive the editors of the Argus out of the building that had been used as a printing office from time immemorial—with the full knowledge moreover that no other building, suitable for the purpose, could be had in the entire town? Did he or did he not after the defeat for the Senate in 1866, offer the services of every questionable propriety to Mr. Welsh of Washington county, in reference to the independent candidacy? Did or did not his son Tommy swagger Mr. Montgomery up to the meeting in the Court House to his room in the National Hotel, and in hearing of the landlord, tell him that "Father would now be glad to see him about that matter?" What matter—of course the proposal to become Mr Montgomery's candidate for the Senate. In pursuance of that notification, "Father" goes to Mr. Montgomery's room the next day.

If Mr. Henry did not entertain Mr. Montgomery's proposal what took him into such disreputable political company? What not a gentler Republican have trampled the base proposition under foot without a moments' consideration? If the poison had not deep hold of him, why did Judge Agnew advise him to feel, in a quiet and manner, after Mr. Henry came from Montgomery's room? If Mr. Henry did not meditate going into the movement, why did he exhibit for months after such extreme chagrin toward those of his intimate friends who had been mainly instrumental in keeping him out of it? Finally, why did he refuse to take part in that campaign—except to throw cold water upon the efforts of his fellow Republicans—when it was confessedly more momentous in its consequences to the government and the country than any that preceded or succeeded it?

Answers to these questions, and perhaps a letter from Mr. Hall of the National, and copies of all the letters sent to Mr Welsh, are now clearly in order. INQUIRER

Daniel Corbus, was nominated for Coroner without opposition—having a total of 2662 votes in the County.

A Word to Farmers.—The first thing for a farmer to find out is, what crops grow best on his soil. Then let him not be discouraged by low prices for a year or two. If he has a grass farm let him make butter right along even if some weeks it does bring him but twenty-five cents. Let him persevere and continue to send a fine article to town, and before the year is out he will get forty-five cents. So with potatoes or hops, or cheese. Farmers differ more in skill as marketers than in industry as producers.

Dyspepsia—Indigestion.—The subject of Indigestion has attracted much attention, because it has ever been a difficult and troublesome disease to treat.

It is characterized by a great variety of symptoms, the most prominent of which are, pain after eating, belching, heartburn, waterbrash, fullness of stomach, with tenderness, load or weight in that region, debility, loss of flesh, despondency, headache, bad or capricious appetite, palpitation, cough, nervousness, restlessness, &c., &c.

Whether the disorder is of long continuance other organs of the body soon become affected, and the lungs, liver, brain, or kidneys frequently suffer.

In fact, Dyspepsia is the forerunner of a great number of diseases, such as Consumption, Scrofula, Hemorrhoids, Uterine difficulties, colic pains, pa

Ascending Vesuvius During the Recent Eruption—An Englishman's Account of the Grand Scene.

To the Editor of the London Times
—SIR: Yesterday morning, about seven o'clock, I went out to get a carriage to go up Mount Vesuvius, and on my way I was asked by a respectable looking man in the street if I had heard the news of the night. He then told me that hundreds of people who had gone up the night before to see the burning lava in the Atrio de Cavallo were dead. I had seen the mountain at eleven o'clock the night before, when there was a stream of lava running from the top of the cone into the Atrio—that is, the valley between Vesuvius and the adjoining hill, the Somma, where there seemed to be a lake of fire.

Later in the night there was a tremendous eruption, a large crater opening suddenly between the Observatory and the Atrio di Cavullo, across the path of the visitors, it is said, of a mile in diameter. We started from Naples at eight o'clock. The view of the mountain was magnificent. An enormous cloud of dense white smoke was ascending to an immense hight above the mountain, like great fleeces of cotton wool, quite unlike any cloud I ever saw. I could see the lava rushing from several openings to the right of and above the Observatory, but below the cone. The lava was still flowing from the cone into the Atrio, but no ash or dust was thrown up. We drove on to Resina, where the population were in fearful excitement, not knowing what to do, and apparently apprehensive of instant death; everybody making signs to us, and telling us to go back. We went on to the Piazza di Pugliano, where we were stopped and told that no one was allowed to go up the mountain by order of the police. However, after some expostulation, I took a guide on the box and started again.

A few minutes afterwards we met a cart bringing down a dead body, and as we went on we saw other bodies—at least twelve—of which only one appeared to be living. They were frightfully burnt on the face and hands, and some which were carried on chairs in a sitting position were very ghastly objects. Further on we met people, officials apparently, coming down, all warning us to go back. At length, when we had arrived at an elbow of the road, not far from the Observatory, we met an officer who had charge of the Observatory, who said that we could not go on, that the danger was imminent; that the lava was running across and down the road before us; that he had orders from the Prefect of Naples to prevent any one ascending, and that we could not pass. My coachman was getting a little anxious though I will do him the justice to say he was not afraid, so I consented not to take the carriage beyond a turn in the road above us to the right, especially as I did not wish to meet the lava in a narrow road where we could not turn the carriage. We left the carriage there and ascended on foot with the guide by a path straight up the mountain side. At length we stood on the edge of the flat ground sloping to the foot of the cone. Currents of lava were running down on both sides of us for left and right the craters from which they flowed were hidden by the smoke; clouds of sun-like scorching fog from the cone came over us, and the lava still poured down to the Atrio. The roar of the mountain, which we had first heard at Portico, was now tremendous, continuous, and unlike anything else I ever heard—like millions of peals of thunder rolling at the same time—when suddenly, about noon, there was a cessation with a low rolling sound, and one could hear the clicking and rippling of the lava currents pouring down the hill sides below. Then, in about a minute, came a deafening roar, shaking the ground under our feet, and a new crater burst forth just on the further side of the Observatory as it seemed to us, and dense clouds of ashes and stones were thrown up into the air and on the left hand of, and mingling with the great white cloud making a great contrast with the dark brown dust and ashes which rose perpendicularly to an immense hight. The rain continued and kept on increasing till it became deafening, and I began to think it might injure our ears. We stayed there about an hour and a half; the scene was magnificent, the smoke occasionally clearing away and giving us the view towards the Atrio, that towards the cone being always clear; but as some of our party fancied the ground might open under our feet and that we might find ourselves in the midst of a new crater, I at length reluctantly sent the guide to bring up the carriage. Had I been alone I should have stayed there till evening. When we had gone down a piece the same phenomena again appeared. The sudden cessation of the tremendous roaring, the clicking and rippling of the falling lava, and the low muttering roar became again audible; then the fearful roar and the shaking of the ground, and another crater burst forth on the bank of the mountain below the Observatory, sending up clouds of dust and ashes, which rolled over and over till they reached an enormous hight, and quite separate from the other clouds. All this time the sun was shining in an Italian sky without a cloud. After stopping some time to admire the scene we continued our descent, but before we reached the bottom of the hill we saw the lava from the last crater tearing its way down through the vineyards to our right with wonderful rapidity. Just an hour after we left the top of the hill the cone commenced throwing up torrents of stones which fell in all directions, but whether the red-hot hail reached our position on the hight I know not. When we reached Resina it was curious to see the congratulations for what they thought our escape on the faces of the people. The uncertainty and the panic were gone, and they were steadily packing up their beds and the few things they could carry, and starting with every sort of conveyance to put their guardian saint, Saint Genaro, between them and danger. When I started from Naples I expected to find all the world at the top of the mountain; but to my surprise, there was not a single stranger there—only a few persons employed in bringing down the dead. I believe the police prevented any carriage passing after ours. The awful roaring of the mountain continued and increased till midnight, when it ceased, and only roared again for a short time about 4 o'clock. To-day the mountain is quieter, and the Neapolitans are a trifle less pale. The view of the mountain at midnight was grand in the extreme. E. L. KNIGHT.

NAPLES, April 27.

A SAD FALLING OUT.—It is indeed a sad falling out when, after years of the closest intimacy, the hair parts company with the head. Fortunately the irreptable separation may be easily prevented and the twain more closely united than ever by a timely and systematic use of Lyon's Kathairon, the most potent invigorant of the hair and promoter of its growth and beauty known to modern pharmacy. It completely obviates the dry and parched condition of the roots of the hair, which is preliminary to its coming out, by supplying the precise degree of moisture requisite to its preservation in a healthy state. It is the only true dissolvent and evaporant of dandruff and other impurities of the scalp, whose presence are injurious to the hair. As a beautifier of the head the Kathairon has no equal. It not only increases the quantity of the hair, but improves its quality immediately, imparting a lustrous appearance and silky texture which are exceedingly attractive.

The Editorial Office and the Counting-Room.

"Shall we ever see a Press that we can always trust to tell the whole truth, without reference to business considerations?" Of course not; and the question is perpetually asked, as the conclusive demonstration of the worthlessness of newspapers, by men who ought to know better. Do you know any business man who tells the whole truth in his operations, irrespective of business considerations;—any Lawyer any Doctor, any Statesman? Till that always promising, never performing race of long-delayed patriots appear, who are to publish great newspapers for the mere advancement of truth, it is probable that the poor papers we have will be issued by their mercenary owners with some sordid purpose of making money by them.

Not irrespective of business considerations, then, but because of them, I believe that, in the better Journalism to which we are tending, we shall approach more and more nearly to an absolute divorce between the Editorial Office and the Counting-room. The great newspapers are those which look for news, not advertisements. With the news comes circulation, and, when circulation commands, the advertisements seek the paper, not the paper the advertisements. Make your newspaper so good, so full of news, so truthful, so able that people must take it; make its circulation so great that advertisers will plead for the privilege of getting into it—those seem to me the two great business commandments of our better Journalism. When, at last, we get our feet planted on this solid ground, no newspaper can afford to suppress or soften the truth in any business interest. The London Times threw away twenty thousand dollars a week in advertisements in the railway mania of 1845. It made money by the loss. It could not have afforded not to throw the money away, for it thereby vindicated its spirit of honest dealing with its readers, in the eyes of all Europe; and its readers were of infinitely more consequence to it than its advertisers. This is precisely the view that your small business man would never take; he would see nothing but the twenty thousand dollars a week that could be had as easily as not by only keeping quiet in the editorial columns; but great newspapers are neither built up nor maintained by small business men. More and more the trade of selling advertisements is getting reduced to as plain a basis as the trade of selling flour or potatoes, where the money paid over the counter represents the exact selling price of the article bought, and there is no dream of further obligation on either side.

By and by we shall see all reputable Journals stop depreciating their own wares by admitting that it is necessary to call attention to an advertisement in the reading columns, to get it seen; treat as preposterous the request that there shall be some notice of theater or lecture, "just to accompany the advertisement, you know;" take as an insult the suggestion that, if an editorial could be made speaking well of the capabilities of a region and its need of a railroad, there would be a heavy advertisement of railroad bonds; utterly refuse, on whatever specious plea of public as well as private interests, to suffer one line to appear as reading matter which the Editor did not select because he thought it of more interest than any other matter it might displace, and the paper did not publish without a penny of pay. Some of these reforms, in the case of any but the strongest journals, will come slowly, for they amount to revolution; but come they will—not because publishers will be more disinterested than now, but because, looking to the rights of the readers, their paramount importance to the newspaper they support and the imperative need of keeping faith with them, publishers will see such reform to be sound business policy, and any other course to be business quackery. —Whitelaw Reid, in Scribner's for June.

LYNCHING IN KANSAS.

A Match for the Missouri Tragedy—Four Men Shot and One Hanged.

Right on the top of the Cass county, Missouri tragedy, says the Topeka Commonwealth, comes an account of a reign of terror in Sumner county, Kansas. The particulars of the murder of Fielder and Anderson by McCarty, at Caldwell, and the subsequent burning of Cotton's store house, have already been published in our columns.

A few days ago an impromptu vigilance committee was formed, composed principally of roughs, broken down gamblers, amateur horse thieves, and a few respectable citizens, who, it appears, joined the party in the heat of the excitement. After organizing, they made a raid over the line into the Indian territory, to where McCarty had concealed himself, ostensibly for the purpose of arresting McCarty, but really for the purpose of murdering him in cold blood, which they succeeded in doing by shooting him after he had surrendered, and then leaving his body on the open prairie five or six days without burial. Since this a shooting scrape came off at Wellington, the county seat of Sumner county, in which a Mr. Maxwell was killed, Mr. Hopkins wounded in the breast, another man also shot in the breast, and Jack Lynch shot in both feet. Maxwell was a highly respectable citizen of Wellington, and it appears was accidentally shot by Lynch. A constable immediately arrested Lynch, and he was held for trial. But this did not suit the Committee of Public Safety at Caldwell, and gathering their forces together they proceeded over to Wellington a distance of twenty-five miles for the purpose of hanging a prisoner already wounded and in the hands of a county officer.

Their first attempt was not a success, as the officer, hearing of their coming, went out on the prairie with his prisoner and remained there all night. But the next night they succeeded in getting possession of the prisoner, and hanged him to a tree on State Creek, about a mile from the town. It is but justice to the citizens of Wellington to say that not one of them was engaged in this outrageous affair, and that they are free from any complicity in it whatever.

Inward Injuries

Those outward manifestations of frail and departing health are easily detected; in truth, outward signs are often marks of an inward disease; the pale face, the lustreless eye, the sunken and hollow cheek, with now and again the circumscribed spot which, while it may not—like that on Cæsar's face—denote anger, it does denote something lacking harmony in the inward workings of the constitution. How quickly does your ear catch the irregular strokes of the pendulum of the clock which indicates something wrong in its internal workings; but how vastly more certain, and of infinitely more importance is the muffled beat of the heart, or the gurgling sound of the lungs, in warning us of the faulty performance of those organs in the human organism. When to this is added the cough, the pains in the chest, the difficult breathing, the livid color of the lips, the hectic fever and the night sweats, what more can be wanting to apprise us of approaching danger? Take Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure. Remove the peccant matter before the wheels of life are loaded until they revolve no longer in unison with that beautiful harmony of health which the God of Nature meant for all.

Sold at $1.50 per bottle, 4 for $5.00 at 167 Liberty street, Pittsburgh. Dr. Keyser's private office for lung examinations in the rear. Office hours from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., and from 3 to 6 p. m., except Sundays and Tuesdays.

A New Sensation.

The Albany Times gives the following account of a burning railroad bridge, a terrified engineer, and a narrow escape:

"Any one who has passed over the Albany Railroad will remember the sharp curves and deep cuts in which that rout abounds in the vicinity of Chatham. Last Saturday evening, as Conductor Russell's train was thundering on towards Albany, the engineer observed, but a little way ahead what he supposed to be a fire by the side of the track. This being no uncommon occurrence he gave it scarce a thought, until, as the engine rounded a short curve, he saw to his horror, that the flames came from a bridge over which the train must pass.

"It was a moment of terrible suspense. Just before, the bridge, which spanned an abyss of some fifty feet, but was without sides or cover was crackling in flames. No earthly power could check the train in time to prevent the disaster which seemed inevitable. Nothing was left but resignation to the decrees of fate. The locomotive with its frightened engineer, the train with its unconscious passengers, rushed on and fortunately passed in safety, the burning timbers being still strong enough to sustain the passing train.

"What the result would have been had the passage been attempted ten minutes later is fearful to contemplate, as on examination the main supports of the bridge were found to be much weakened and the fire making rapid progress."

What it Deserves.

Good citizens seldom have cause to complain of the severity of the sentences passed upon criminals by our judges. It is rare, too, that any earnest commendation of a good act is disagreed with. These principles enter to a large degree into business.—The public is always willing to take any article offered for sale on its real merits and render a verdict accordingly. If the article is found wanting, sales decrease and business diminishes. If it proves all it professes to be, sales increase and prosperity attends it. This is peculiarly the case with sewing machines. The Singer machine has been before the public for many years, and has resorted to no "clap trap" to effect sales. The number disposed of annually has been steadily on the increase, and to-day nearly one-third of the whole number of machines in use in this country are of the Singer make. This fact speakes volumes, and is better proof of the popularity of the Singer than any other that could be adduced. Straw & Morton, No. 24 Sixth street Pittsburgh.

VINEGAR BITTERS

VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL

PURE DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA

VINEGAR BITTERS

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, curing off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, for Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Greatest thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases. Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Typesetters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, will be subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

FOR THE

FLORENCE

Sewing Machine.

Wherever the FLORENCE Machine has been introduced, it has met with the greatest success. It is the only machine making four different stitches, and having its Reversible Feed. The machinery is perfect, and the motions positive. It runs light and very fast, and sews coarse or fine fabrics. The Hemmer will turn wide or narrow hems, and fells beautifully. All attachments go with the machine.
